Amcor Innovation & Development brings together the disciplines of graphic and industrial design, animation and engineering.

Collectively this enables the delivery of technically sound solutions with a strong focus and understanding around supply chain performance.

To illustrate the complex production process of the beverage can, Amcor I&D has developed an animation to showcase such. Exhibiting both the complexities of each production stage and the internal and external machinery layouts, this animation has been distributed across all processing plants for internal training and marketing purposes.

With a vision to be the strongest link in their customers' value chain, Amcor Beverage Cans aims to forge long-term business partnerships. Based on a superior understanding of the beverage market dynamics and the application of leading edge technology, Amcor is continually striving to lead the way in not only beverage packaging but environmentally sustainable practice.

With a wide range of packaging options, Amcor Beverage Cans is the market leader in metal packaging for beverages. Supplying leading Australian and New Zealand beverage manufacturers, Amcor relentlessly pushes the boundaries. A diverse range of packaging solutions for beer and soft drinks, as well as pre-mixed spirits, energy drinks, wine, dairy, cordial, juice, water and functional drinks illustrates the importance that Amcor has in the global beverage market.

This animation was created to show the entire can production process lifespan. This allows viewers to see and understand each stage of the process and the detail that each stage contains both in the external machinery layouts and the internal machinery components.
